CAA Co-Sponsorship Fund

The Columbia Alumni Association (CAA) is the University-wide body that brings together 260,000+ alumni of the University. CAA seeks to strengthen the bonds between Columbians of all generations and geographies through events, programs, and online resources that reach alumni worldwide and students on campus. CAA’s Student-Alumni Relations Committee works to increase interaction between students and alumni in meaningful ways and to educate current students about the resources and networks of the lifelong Columbia connection.

To help fulfill its mission, the Columbia Alumni Association is pleased to announce the creation of a co-sponsorship fund for recognized student organizations at Columbia University.

Purpose:
The CAA Co-Sponsorship Fund invites formally-recognized student organizations at Columbia University to apply for financial support for initiatives that bring Columbia students and alumni together, or heighten awareness of the CAA to the student body.

Eligibility:
- The event/program must bring together students with alumni around a shared point of interest that relates to the mission of the student organization.
- The event/program must be organized by a recognized student organization in good standing with the University.
- Membership in the organization must reflect multiple schools (three or more).
- The event/program must occur in the semester that the funding was awarded.
- Funding can only be used for the event/program identified in the application, no substitutions can be made.
- Any unused funding should be returned to CAA within one month of the completion of the event/program.
