Panos Minogiannis ’97PH, ’01PH

Panos Minogiannis received both his MPH and his PhD from Columbia — writing a dissertation for the latter, in 2001, on “European Integration and Health Policy.” After graduating Minogiannis went on to serve first as the health care services coordinator for the 2004 Olympic Games in Athens, and then as the head of polyclinic operations at the 2006 Asian Games in Doha, Qatar. He went on to work for more than two years as the general manager of Galinos General Hospital in Athens and since January 2009 has been the general manager of Euromedica Ionios General Hospital in Corfu, Greece. This semester he is also a visiting lecturer at the Mailman School of Public Health.
